As of 28/02/2026

OBJECTIVE

The principal investment objective of the Fund is to achieve long-term capital appreciation at the risk of moderate short-term volatility of capital values. The fund will be a Diversified CIS.

STRATEGY

To achieve the investment objective, the fund invests in a well-diversified portfolio consisting of listed equities, bonds, properties, and cash across geographical regions and uses a core satellite portfolio construction approach in order to establish an optimal risk-controlled solution while aiming at outperformance in the medium to longer term. The fund has a capital preservation focus, with a flexible asset allocation strategy that seeks to minimise the risk of drawdown. The Fund is aimed at investors with a long-term (5 years or more) investment time horizon. This Fund is best suited for investors who can accept some volatile capital movements within a year but seek returns in excess of U.S long term inflation plus 3% (in $ terms) over a rolling 3-year period.

MANAGER COMMENTS

February was shaped by an unusual blend of supportive macro data and headline driven policy risk. Markets navigated two major crosswinds. First, the US Supreme Court ruled against using the International Economic Emergency Powers Act as the basis for April 2025 reciprocal tariffs, reopening uncertainty around future trade policy. Second, tensions between the US and Iran escalated and culminated in armed conflict, although the most acute hostilities began after markets had largely closed for February, setting up greater volatility in March.

Despite the political noise, economic signals were more constructive. Business surveys pointed to broadening growth across manufacturing and services, while inflation signals in several major economies were less threatening than feared. This combination helped sustain risk appetite even as investors stayed alert to policy and geopolitical risks.

Equity performance in February was driven more by leadership shifts than index moves. Investors continued rotating away from mega cap US technology, reflecting growing sensitivity to whether AI investment will deliver durable returns. Although US earnings were generally strong, hyperscalers were punished after signaling further large increases in capital expenditure, raising concerns about payback periods and competition.

This shift supported rotation toward value and asset heavy sectors tied to AI infrastructure. Materials, utilities and energy outperformed technology, reflecting demand for inputs needed for data centers, grid upgrades and electrification. Emerging markets also outperformed developed markets, particularly parts of Asia and Latin America linked to hardware, commodities and industrial activity within the AI capex cycle. Japan also stood out, supported by domestic political developments that strengthened expectations for fiscal support and policy continuity, alongside an export tailwind.

Fixed income delivered constructive results. Despite resilient activity data, policy uncertainty and geopolitical risk supported demand for high quality government bonds. Yields drifted lower in several developed markets, while the UK benefited from cooling inflation expectations that strengthened prospects for earlier rate cuts. In the US, yields reflected a tug of war between steady activity and policy uncertainty. Japan remained the main source of rates volatility as fiscal concerns pushed long dated yields higher.

Commodities were positive, led by gold as investors sought geopolitical hedges. Overall, February highlighted rotation, broader market leadership and the continued diversification case for investors.

A higher TER does not necessarily imply a poor return, nor does a low TER imply a good return. Also, the current TER may not necessarily be an accurate indication of future TERs.

Past performance is not necessarily a guide to future performance. CISs are traded at ruling process and can engage in borrowing and scrip lending. The portfolio may include underlying foreign investments, and may as a result be exposed to macroeconomic, political, foreign exchange, tax, settlement, reporting or illiquidity risk factors that may be different to similar investments in South African markets. The underlying foreign investments may also be adversely affected by foreign investment policies, restrictions on repatriation of investments and other restrictions and controls that may be imposed by the relevant authorities of the relevant countries. The CIS Manager reserves the right to close the fund to new investors if it is necessary to limit further inflows for it to be managed in accordance with its mandate. The investment performance is calculated after taking the actual initial fees and all ongoing fees into account. The reinvestment of income is calculated on the actual amount distributed per participatory interest by using the ex-dividend date NAV price of the applicable class of the portfolio, irrespective of the actual reinvestment date. The value of participatory interests or the investment may go down as well as up. The CIS Manager does not provide any guarantee either with respect to the capital or the return of a portfolio. All CIS are traded at ruling prices and can engage in borrowing and scrip lending. Income is reinvested on the investment date. The TER charged by any underlying fund held as part of a fund's portfolio is included in the fund expenses portion of the TER, but trading and implementation costs incurred in managing the fund are included. It should not be considered in isolation as returns may be impacted by many other factors over time including market returns, the type of fund, the investment decisions of the investment manager and the TER. The Total Investment Charge (TIC) is the sum of the Total Expense Ratio (TER) and Transaction Costs (TC).
